CHAPTER 1 - Gāthās

Y28

Y28.1

Happiness be to him who spreads the Truth, may prosperity attend him, may life be long; may strength be conferred upon him by the Lord who knows the mind.

Y28.2

O God, you who are the Knower, hear my voice: grant me and my companions the strength to proceed on the right path, so that our intention and our word may be in accordance with Aša.

Y28.3

I proclaim the way that leads to blessing; let the Good Mind govern our thoughts, let the true word blossom from our lips.

Y28.4

Not out of selfishness do I ask, but for the multitude who seek the good; make us instruments of your order, O Creator, and fill us with the gift of clarity.

Y28.5

A lie has no stability: he who embraces it destroys his own house; but the Truth upholds the lineage and gives fruit to righteous works.

Y28.6

Be thou a witness to him who works for Aša, and a judge of the wicked: reward awaits the righteous, ruin awaits him who chooses Druj.

Y28.7

For this reason I sing and proclaim: let our works be a sign of our faith; the word of the righteous be a shield and the word of the liar be destruction.

in high spirits; his steps do not falter, his home remains a firm refuge.

Y29.2

O God, establish Thy truth in the souls of men; let Good Mind guide the rulers and justice be their law.

Y29.3

I do not wish only my own good, but that of all those who love Aša; let the community of the righteous grow and let falsehood be driven away.

Y29.4

The wicked, though he uses cunning, remains poor in true valor; his victory is fleeting, his throne totters and his fame fades.

Y29.5

Just as the earth rejects the bad seed, so the world rejects those who work for Druj; but justice protects the children of light and spreads its robe over them.

Y29.6

O Lord, make clear the reward of the righteous and the punishment of the wicked; so that men may choose with full knowledge and not in ignorance.
